Hose Carts and Hose Reels Specification Sheet

A hose reel is bought once and judged for years. The capacity claim has to be honest and the frame has to survive being dragged across gravel. This family runs from a simple reel through two wheel carts up to a metal frame reel that takes 100 metres of 1/2 inch hose, plus a compact set built around an expandable hose.

Why This Family Is Built This Way

- Stated capacity given against a specific hose size 1/2 inch or 13 mm
- Cart and reel versions of the same storage capacity so the buyer picks the format
- Metal frame models for the 100 metre capacity step
- Most models supplied without hose so they pair with your own hose programme

Problems It Solves

- Capacity claims that only hold if the hose is wound perfectly
- Plastic frames that crack at the axle after one season
- Bulky cartons that wreck the CBM on a mixed container
- Customers who want storage without buying a hose they already own

Questions Buyers Ask

Does the reel come with hose?

Most models are supplied without hose and the stated capacity tells you how much 1/2 inch or 13 mm hose they take. The Lego hose reel set is the exception and ships with a 50 ft expandable hose.

How is capacity measured?

Against 1/2 inch or 13 mm hose, which is what we publish on each model. A thicker hose reduces the metres the drum holds, so match the capacity figure to the hose you actually sell.

Which models have a metal frame?

The 100 metre capacity models. They ship in a colour box and their published net weight is roughly double that of the equivalent plastic unit.

How many carts fit in a carton?

Between three and twelve depending on the model. Each product page gives carton size, pieces per carton, CBM and net and gross weight so you can plan a container before you order.

Can these be private labelled?

Yes. Private label and customised products are a standard part of what we do, and colour box artwork is the usual starting point for this family.
